TO THE PEOPLE.

The District Atterney-Moses A. Dropsie, Req. The period is approaching when it becomes necessary to nominate and elect some eligible candidate the important office AlDistrict Attorney for the

and county of Philagelphia, and although I probably have no more interest in the question than any other patriotic citizen, I take leave to express my views in relation to it, in the hope that they may so far awaken public sentiment in regard to it as may lead to such action as will be commensurate with the importance of the subject. I shall not attempt in doing se to dictate to others who are as well able to judge as myself, or to condemn others who happen to disagree with my suggestions, my main object being to invite the attention of my fellow-citizens to a fair, full, and timely consideration of the vital importance to the community of a judicious and dispassionate selection for this most important and lucrative position. I am not a party politician. I am fettered to no faction. I am not disposed to abuse one man or one set of men, or to throw them into the shade merely to brighten the claims of those whom I should prefer. This would be ungenerous, and perhaps unjust, and possibly tend to arouse invidious and acrimonious feeling, which is always unfavorable to the fair and judicious exercise of political opinions. Let us then calmly inquire what are the indispensable requisites of a successful candidate for the office referred to.

It is, as we have said, rightly considered a post of great power and dignity, and the reputation of the incumbent must correspond with its requirements and character, and be beyond reproach. He must be a gentleman-we don't mean by this he must be rich or gay or fashionable, but that he must have the instincts and manners of a gentleman, even if he were in poverty or rags, we know with some persons this is a frightful word; it smacks of aristocracy and men cry out against it, yet let me tell you it should be an ingredient of the fitness for office that should never be lost sight of. A gentleman, it is true, is nothing without legal and moral competency-but mere competency is much impaired by a want of gentility, or call it, if you please, urbanity or civility. If a magistrate is a ruffian, the criminal arraigned before him seems to share in his nature and only differs in his place. The Prosecuting Attorney should keep his hands and his skirts clear from the influence of all those who are notorious violators of the laws, such as gamesters, policy-dealers, ballot-stuffers, brawlers, and disturbers of the peace. He should be a consistent member of the party which he represents; but in the duties of his office he should know no party and be influenced by no political prejudices or predilections. He is the representative of justice, and his robes of office must be unstained, his reputation untainted, and his impartiality unsuspected He must not compromise his dignity and place by uniting with the stool-pigeons, deectitves, or mere emissaries of justice, who always take more character from him than they can ever impart to him, and thereby weaken the energies and destroy the purity and symmetry of judicial proceedings. In addition to those qualifications, he should be a lawyer, or course, not a pettifogger, but a scientific, practical lawyer.

Now whom should we nominate possessing these recommendations? While speaking of those who are eminently qualified, it must not be supposed that I would disparage other aspirants, but to leave the estimate of their merits to those who best know them and are best enabled to determine upon their absolute or comparative ability. In my view, then, and with this explanation of my purpose, it may be said there is one gentleman whose eligibility, founded upon the requirements already stated. would seem to be unquestionable. A fine scholar, an accomplished lawyer, a philanthropist, one of the founders of the Republican party, and who, if we remember rightly, was formerly placed in nomination before the Republican convention for this very office, and received nearly a majority of votes on the first ballot-we refer to Moses A. Dropsie, Esq. To those who are intimate with Mr. Dropsie these commendations are perhaps not as important as to others, but still it may not be improper, we trust, to refer to them. Remember, this argument in his favor does not depend upon defaming or decrying his competitors; the man who builds his hope of success upon the want of merit in his adversaries merely, instead of competency in himself, relies upon a very insecure basis, when he appeals to the favor of a judicious and intelligent community. We need scarcely add in behalf of the gentleman whose name is thus presented that he is of a humane, fearless, and exemplary moral reputation, and if elected to the office of District Attorney will reflect honor upon the station and confer a lasting benefit upon the

Now, in common with this subject, it may not be amiss to remark that the influence and power of the District Attorney, while it materially affects the community at large, has a still more direct jeffect upon the character, conduct, and efficiency of the members of the bar practising in the criminal court. There was a time when such men as Lewis, Sergeant, Binney, Ingersoll, Dallas, and Rawle, and, indeed, all the magnates of the profession, flourished in the halls of the Court of Oyer and Terminer, and imparted to criminal jurisprudence all the dignity. learning, and fame that contributed to render the courts the cynosure of the entire country. Even the Supreme Court itself at this time does not exhibit that becoming decorum, respect, and gravity that pervaded at that time what were called the inferior tribunals of justice.

Now, alas! how changed! Why changed? Be cause there is a lack of system, a lack of courtesy and gentility, for which are substituted, by a hurryskurry mode of doing business, Pompei quam pugna aptior. This is partly attributable, no doubt, to the large increase of a heterogeneous population, and the proportionate increase and variety of trials, and the wretched want of accommodation in the rooms appropriated to justice. The judges are not to be censured: their deportment is becoming; they cannot be bellowing out to the criers or tipstaves to keep order. The difference between the deportment now and formerly is that between a rowdy mob and a refined drawing-room. Instead of teaching others by example, and inspiring them with respect for the dignity of the place, lawyers and clients, prosecutors and criminals, witnesses and jurors, are all jumbled together, and seem perfectly satisfied with this constrained association. These things should certainly be amended, and the amending and controlling power should be exercised by the District Attorney, standing as he does between the judiciary DAVID PAUL BROWN. and the public. When the atmosphere is made sufficiently cold to preserve meats, etc., sweet, there is no moisture, and the presence of moisture or sweat is a sure indication that the temperature is too mild for the purpose.
